HISTORY OF NATHANIEL HUNTER, SR.'S FAMILY, OR HIS BRANCH OF IT

He was born in the Kingdom of Ireland, County of Down, and Parish of Saintfield, about twelve miles south of Belfast, Ireland, December, 14th, 1768.

Ann Porter was born in the same county and Parish May 15th, 1772, and married Nathaniel Hunter February 2nd, 1790. They were both of Scotch descent, their ancestors emigrating from Scotland to Ireland in 1607, at the time King James 1st, after subduing Ireland, confiscated the lands of the chiefs of O'Niel and O'Donnell of the Ulster tribes, (they having fled to Spain,) consisting of eight hundred thousand acres of land.

This land was divided out to Scotch Colonists who settled it, and this was the beginning of the Scotch Irish race, whose descendants have emigrated to, and become the best citizens of most of the states of the United States.

Their history in Ireland has been one of religious warfare from their settlement until the present.

These settlers being of the Protestant religion and (the native Irish Roman Catholic) so a continual strife was kept up between the factions.

In 1641 the English Parliament advocated repressive measures against the Catholics with threats to oust more of the Irish and introduce English settlers in their stead, when the native Irish turned savagely on the Protestant Colonies of Ulster and murder and atrocities of all kinds were committed in North Ireland at Portadown about twenty miles west of Saintfield Parish, hundreds of the victims were driven into the river and drowned. We have it handed down from Alexander Sinclair Hunter, that many of the relatives of our ancestors were victims at this place.

The total victims of this insurrection was estimated at thirty thousand.

Another family of this Scotch Irish colony were the Sinclairs who became related to the Hunters. We find they were an old and highly honored family of Scotland and at one time held the Earldom of Rosslyn and Janet Sinclair had the training of Maryr Queen of Scots in her youth.

Nathaniel Hunter in the year of 1808 while in Virginia inherited property from the estate of John Sinclair of Saintfield Parish, Ireland. S. M. Hunter has a copy of the power of Attorney, sent by Nathaniel Hunter to Francis Breeze, Attorney in County Down, authorizing said Attorney to receipt for Nathaniel Hunter for his part of said estate. Nathaniel Hunter also named his oldest son after Alexander Sinclair.

This Scotch Irish colony continues to live and thrive in the north of Ireland until this day; sending out energetic men and women.

After the American Revolution was over and the United States had thrown off the yoke of English oppression; emigration from Ireland to America set in with renewed interest.

In the year of 1793 while the Irish rebellion was brewing (which broke out in full force in 1798) the prospects for peaceful and successful life growing dimmer in Ireland, and America holding out bright prospects, not only for success in worldly affairs, but in the Liberty of conscience of freedom of manhood and speech; Nathaniel Hunter with his young wife, he being twenty-five and she twenty-one, with one daughter, Mary Ann, two year old, set sail for America.

We have no record of this voyage but find them in Greenbriar County, Virginia, in 1794.

That they had many friends and relatives that came with them to this country we have evidence. We have records that show business relations between Alexander Sinclair and Nathaniel Hunter in Virginia on June 22nd, 1794, also many Scotch names of parties transacting business with him the same year in Virginia, among them Robt. McCullough and Alexander Buckhannum.

In reference to the Scotch Irish, Theodore Roosevelt in his "Winning of the West" has this to say of them: "Among those who thus went south west were the Scotch Irish, a people to whom historians are now beginning to render justice.

In great numbers these people, English in speech, Scotch in blood, Irish by adoption, Presbyterian and Methodist in faith, came to America. Philadelphia and the Pennsylvania low lands were full of them. Princeton University is their memorial in New Jersey.

They entered the Appalachian Valley, largely populated West Virginia, and were the backbone of the young commonwealth that sprang up on the Tennessee and Cumberland.

They formed the kernel of the distinctively and intensely American stock, who were the pioneers of our people in their March Westward, the Vanguard of the army of fighting settlers who with ax and rifle won their way from the Alleghanies to the Rio Grand and Pacific Coast.

In 1810 emigration from the Central Atlantic States set in to the North West territory with such magnitude that the historian McMasters says: "A Pennsylvania village witnessed the passage in one month, of 1811, of two hundred and thirty six wagons with two thousand people all bound for Ohio."

That Point Pleasant at the crossing on the West Virginia side grew from a few huts in 1810 to five hundred inhabitants in a short space of time.

Our ancestors lived in Virginia fifteen years, and in 1809 they became enthused with the idea of moving west. This enthusiasm prevailed the whole family, so much so that they went to work to prepare for their journey.

They built two large wagons, which would in these days look more like small steamboats, they did the most of the work within themselves.

They procured ten large horses for that day, they also had one for mother to ride.

Thus in the year of 1810 we were about ready to start on our journey west. When the time came the horses, with their new harness were hitched, five to each wagon, and everything was ready. Mother mounted her pony, boys and girls ready to drive the six cows. The entire neighborhood were there to see us off. With many sad partings, we pulled stakes and moved out, a very memorable time to us and many of our good neighbors, we started for Ohio, what seemed then to be the far west.

I remember of an incident when we came to the mountain to go down to New River; the single tract down the mountain to the river was so narrow that wagons could not pass, so a messenger was dispatched to see that the way was clear, and we got down without any mishap.

Here we had to ferry across the river, all went well until our cows became frightened and jumped overboard, which caused us considerable trouble.

But now came the tug, climbing the mountain on the opposite side, here we had to double teams, and all the way up stones and fire flew, got up without any serious trouble.

The next large river that we had to cross was the Kanawha, here we swam our cows over. We had the pleasure of seeing the large salt works here.

This brought us into Ohio at Point Pleasant; we made our way as best we could to Chillicothe, which was then a town of considerable size.

We finally stopped near what was then called Possum Run in Madison county, eight miles south of London.

Here father bought a three years' lease of a man of a large tract of land. got several hundred bushels of corn and a lot ~~corn~~. 4000

It was now about twenty-two days since we left our old home in Virginia, and we were all about worn out. We unloaded and went into winter quarters.

The next spring we put out a large crop of corn, we boys and girls raised the crop, and father went on to select for us our future home. It was some time before he found anything that suited him, but finally bought quite a large tract of land, about (950) nine hundred and fifty acres, nearly three miles south-east of West Liberty and two miles west of what is now Mt. Tabor.

During our stay in Madison county sister Elizabeth was born. While the family remained on the lease, father took one or two of the boys with him and went to the land and built a log house and made some improvements; and in the spring of 1814 they moved to their new home in the wilderness. Now the whole family are here alive and well and happy.

The Indians lived in a village on Mac-a-cheek nearby. We always kept our guns loaded and ready for an emergency, but were never disturbed by the Indians. We built the stone house in 1820 that now stands on the farm near where the first log house was built.

This is as John Hunter, son of Nathaniel Hunter, Sr., related it to his son, N. C. Hunter, a short time before his death. I, N. C. Hunter, still own the farm at this time, 1905, ninety-one years after our family settled there.

They naturally began to look around to see about school houses and churches. They found none. Being religiously inclined they hunted up their neighbors which were few and far between. But they found some six or eight families within a radius of from six to ten miles, who seemed to readily enter into arrangements to meet together for worship. Found a family who was there a little before them; by the name of Grifieth Evans, who offered his log cabin with its earthen floor; they made seats out of puncheon, as there were no saw mills. Here they worshiped for three or four years. At this time they purchased, at a nominal price, one acre of ground, upon which they built their church edifice, it being a log structure, (using it for a school house also.)

This site being on quite an elevation and one of nature's lovely spots, this place they named Mt. Tabor. Their first preacher was Saul Hinkle.

As above stated their house was built of logs, with five corners, in the fifth corner they raised the earth and built a fire thereon (to heat their house) with charcoal, but greatly to the annoyance of the preacher, and mortification of the people, the smoke and gas could not be endured, so ended their first efforts at heating their little church in the wilderness; this being in 1817.

In the year 1818 they held their first campmeeting west of the church. This was followed by another meeting in 1819. Among those attending the latter, were about three hundred Indians, mingling and worshipping with their white brethren and neighbors. The then noted Lorenzo Dow met with them.

Among the families comprising the first society at Mt. Tabor were the Evans, Hunters, Scotts, Latties, Thompsons, Casebolts, Burgess, Mayses and Humphreys. The first church edifice was destroyed by fire in 1824. The society and friends of Methodism again rallied and this time built a brick church, size thirty by forty feet. The society had sent to them from time to time such men of God as J. Strange, Biglow, Wm. Raper, Finley, George Walker and others.

Through the labors of these men of God, and local preachers and laymen the "Wilderness has truly bloomed and blossomed as the rose."

I have about thirty-five pages more of the history of Mt. Tabor written, it is not expedient to insert it in this family history.

May 23, 1829, and died April 20, 1880. Nathaniel C. Hunter, now in his 80th year, has lived long and had a very busy life being useful in his day and generation, being loyal to his country and the church. Has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for sixty-five years. He has always strove in his place, doing his duty without fear, favor or affection. Has served for fifty years as Sunday School Superintendent, and has filled almost all the offices in the church.

Born to them three sons.

John G. was born June 17, 1850.

Albert L. was born August 4, 1852.

William P. was born March 12, 1855, died in San Antonia, Texas, January 5, 1882, his mother preceding him two years.

Here I copy a short memorial written by his pastor, Henry Miller, pastor at Mt. Tabor at that time.

In the year 1870, under the labors of David Whitmore, he was converted and joined the church at Mt. Tabor. In the rich soil of a pure heart bloomed and blossomed the graces of a christian life, shedding its fragrance on all around. Conscious to the last he stepped out boldly into the merky current, saying "Come Lord Jesus, take me, Oh! take me quickly."

Then he was not; for God had taken him. Though young he had the welfare of the church at heart. Over one year before his death while confined to his bed he sent for me. He told me that as he was no longer able, to attend the services of the church and Sabbath School of which he was a member, and render himself useful in that way, he greatly desired to give some expression of Love for the cause and society with which he was connected. Being a great lover of music and a fine musician himself, he wished to present to the Mt. Tabor society and Sabbath School, an organ for the use of the congregation and Sabbath School hoping thereby to stimulate and encourage his young friends and the congregation to rebuild and keep up this old time honored place. He then gave me a letter to read to the membership of the church asking for the privilege of so doing. The letter was filled with love and devotion was read to the whole congregation. They arose and with tears and visible emotion gratefully accepted the gift of the young Christian. From this came the inspiration to build the new and beautiful house of worship at Mt. Tabor. What a beautiful illustration of the scriptures: "Their works do follow them." His remains were brought home from San Antonia, Texas, attended by his ever faithful father, and on the 12th of January, 1882, in the presence of a large congregation of sympathising friends and relatives, at his old Forest Home, the solemn funeral services were held, the church being unfinished. The remains of this brilliant life were laid to rest by the side of his sainted mother, who had preceded him two years, under the shadow of the new church.
